Notice that adverbs, prepositions, and conjunctions do not have dictionary information. Certain verbs (specifically those that are commands) do not have dictionary information. This is because they have already been conjugated. For example, you would not be able to find tacē! and tacēte! (which both mean “be quiet!”) in a dictionary because they are conjugated forms, but you would be able to find taceō, tacēre, which means “to be quiet.”

For those who have not yet done so, please read over my guide to dictionary information.
